Health Disparities at the Intersection of Race, Ethnicity, and Disabilities

This session explores health disparities and explores how disparities impact families, providers, and society. Ms. Kornblau addresses challenges such as the double burden, the multiplier effect, and the amplifying phenomenon, and shares what we can do to minimize the negative effects of these challenges on families. Case studies allow us to unpack and practice effective advocacy at interpersonal, institutional, and policy levels.

LEARNING OBJECTIVES

1. Discuss societal trends, concepts, and challenges related to health disparities faced by people with disabilities.
2. Explain how disability-based health disparities at the intersection of race and ethnicity affect families, support personnel, and community-based providers.
3. Identify and share tools, methods, and approaches with families and others for effective advocacy to decrease disability-based health disparities
4. Share insights on how to negotiate with institutions and other professionals to decrease disability-based health disparities and increase effectiveness in their professional roles.
